Tracy C. Miller

Orange County Domestic Violence
Restraining Order Lawyer

As a former felony Deputy District Attorney handling cases vertically in the domestic violence unit, Tracy C. Miller has a niche practice relating to the criminal and family law effects of domestic violence restraining orders. Miller's representation is unique. As a boutique firm she provides individualized attention to her clients' domestic violence matters by carefully strategizing between their criminal and family law cases. Miller's experience with domestic violence cases allows her to assess their complicated dynamics from two different perspectives: as a former prosecutor, and now as a criminal defense and family law attorney. Some of O.C.'s most prestigious law firms have sought out Miller to consult with her concerning case strategy relating to the very unique crossover in criminal and family law pertaining to incidents of domestic violence.

Miller's dedication to domestic violence matters extends to her pro bono work for Laura's House. There she assists victims attempting to obtain domestic violence restraining orders, as well as those defending against false claims of domestic violence. Miller is also affiliated with Montage Legal Group, a network of freelance attorneys who opted out of the traditional practice model in favor of flexibility, and now work on an hourly basis for other law firms.

Miller knows a domestic violence restraining order may severely affect a parent's legal custody, visitation with their children, and/or spousal support orders. Where criminal charges are filed, along with a domestic violence restraining order, much more is at stake because one's liberty may be taken away in an instant – often by a spouse's false claims made to gain an advantage in a child custody battle. Miller is one of the few attorneys in O.C. who has experience handling domestic violence matters in both the family and criminal courts. Whether a victim of domestic violence or an accused, she will work tirelessly to make certain your rights are fully protected. ■
